EDITOR'S note

Welcome to the premier issue of the St. Joseph's College Magazine, one element of an integrated communications plan launched by the College this past year. Read more about this bold new initiative in VP Nancy Connors' article (page 13).

St. Joseph's is a dynamic community with many diverse constituencies, joined by their common belief in our mission of providing a strong academic and value-oriented education at the undergraduate and graduate levels. It made sense, then, to create one all-inclusive publication that would serve as the official bulletin of St. Joseph's College, connecting our various audiences while providing informative news and feature articles about our faculty, staff, students, alumni, academic programs, special events, and other timely topics.

In this issue, we take a hard look at national trends indicating a widening gulf between today's college students and the American political system. Have many students become disenchanted with politics in general, consumed instead with the responsibilities of work and school that leave little time or energy for civic engagement? If so, what can colleges do to counter student apathy? In her cover story, Amy Cole examines this critical issue, interviewing SJC professors for their take on the matter. Amy also talks to SJC President S. Elizabeth Hill to find out what St. Joseph's is doing to encourage students to take a more active role in society.

As a child of the '60s, when student engagement was perhaps at an all-time high, I have often worried about the apparent lack of involvement on the part of today's young people. I therefore found it refreshing to speak to some of our own St. Joseph's students, whose passion and commitment affirmed in me the belief that young people can and will speak out when they are personally moved by an issue or current event. (See "What do students say?"). For still another perspective, I invite you to read Congressman Tim Bishop's thoughtful piece in this issue's Final Word column.

This issue also includes the 2002-03 President's Report, as well as interviews with VP for Academic Affairs S. Loretta McGrann and new man around campus, Suffolk Academic Dean Dr. Randall Krieg. Additionally, I hope you will enjoy our profiles of some interesting "SJC People," plus special departments devoted to alumni news, faculty achievements, sports, giving, and others.

We look forward to your feedback. So let us know how we're doing, suggest ideas for articles you'd like to see in future issues, drop us a line. Please direct correspondence to: Editor, St. Joseph's College Magazine, 319 West Roe Blvd., Patchogue, NY 11772. You may also e-mail your letter or comments to skane@sjcny.edu. For letters intended for publication, please include a telephone number where you may be reached.

Until then, happy reading!

SJC graduates 756 at spring commencements

Three distinguished speakers addressed the Class of 2003 at spring commencement ceremonies at the Suffolk and Brooklyn Campuses. The 520 graduates of the School of Arts & Sciences and the School of Adult & Professional Education in Patchogue were honored by the presence of U. S. Secretary of Education Roderick Paige, who delivered an uplifting message at the May 31 ceremony. On the Brooklyn Campus, S. Mary Florence Burns, Ph.D., the College's vice president for academic affairs for 34 years until her retirement on July 1, addressed the School of Arts & Sciences at its June 6 commencement. The night before in Brooklyn, on June 5, the School of Adult & Professional Education recognized one of its own when speaker John T. Odermatt received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. Mr. Odermatt '93 is commissioner of the New York City Office of Emergency Management.

Library recognized by state

New York State Education Commissioner Richard Mills recently recognized St. Joseph's College's Brooklyn Campus library as an "Electronic Doorway Library," one of a growing number of libraries in the state officially designated for its use of computers and telecommunications technology to provide electronic library services.

"This official designation recognizes that the St. Joseph's College library is using advanced technology to modernize the delivery of library services," said Janet M. Welch, state librarian and assistant commissioner for libraries. "Our vision is that every individual in New York State will have access to 'Electronic Doorway' services like those provided at St. Joseph's."

An "Electronic Doorway Library" provides a two-way flow of requests and information into and out of a library by electronic means. "People in today's fast-paced society cannot live, learn, and work without access to current information," said S. Elizabeth Hill, president of St. Joseph's. "Our library uses computer and telecommunication technology, a full range of library resources, and the services of skilled librarians to fulfill the ever-increasing technological requests of our students."

Conference on Women and Christianity draws hundreds

Dr. Serene Jones

Dr. Elizabeth Johnson, C.S.J.

Despite social and economic inroads gained by women over the past three decades, the short- and long-term effects of violence, patriarchal systems and inequality – including within the Christian Church – remain pronounced among today's females, two prominent feminist theologians told an audience of over 300 at an all-day conference sponsored by the College's Institute for the Study of Religion in Community Life in October.

But by the close of the conference, entitled "Women in the Christian Tradition: Past, Present, Future," speakers Dr. Elizabeth Johnson, C.S.J., and Dr. Serene Jones expressed optimism that the spirit of the women's movement of the '70s is still relevant and significant in the year 2003.

A distinguished professor of theology at Fordham University and author who began her college teaching career at St. Joseph's, Dr. Johnson examined the "ambiguity" that has characterized the Church's view of its female members through the centuries, apparent in Biblical texts that both denigrate and extol the virtues of women and the writing of male theologians such as St. Thomas Aquinas.

On the other hand, there is the little-known Gospel

According to Mary Magdalene, written in the 2nd century when the struggle for female leadership in the early church was "raging," and Pope John Paul II's more recent encyclical, Letter to Women, which affirms the dignity of women in civil society, Dr. Johnson noted. And there are the words and actions of Jesus, who had female as well as male followers.

Dr. Serene Jones, who serves on Yale University's Women & Gender Studies Council and has faculty appointments at Yale Law School, Yale Divinity School, and in the Department of African-American Studies, focused on the contemporary situation, noting the lingering effects of violence suffered by generations of women and the "divide" between the public and private lives of females.

Although 85 percent of U.S. females work outside the home, most women still manage the bulk of the domestic labor within households, thereby "doing double duty," Dr. Jones said. Coupled with domestic violence, which "lives on in our bodies and our psyches," these realities result in exhaustion, depression, posttraumatic stress syndrome, and burnout, she said.

For Dr. Jones, an ordained minister in both the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and the United Church of Christ, hope lies in "a radical rethinking of the category grace" to include "grace as home. . . the place where we are safe," and the very real possibility of "rewriting the scripts of our imagination" and enhancing "our capacity to experience beauty and pleasure."

The conference included a panel discussion, "As We Move Forward." The October program at the Suffolk Campus was the three-year-old Institute's best-attended event to date.

Coalition taps S. Elizabeth

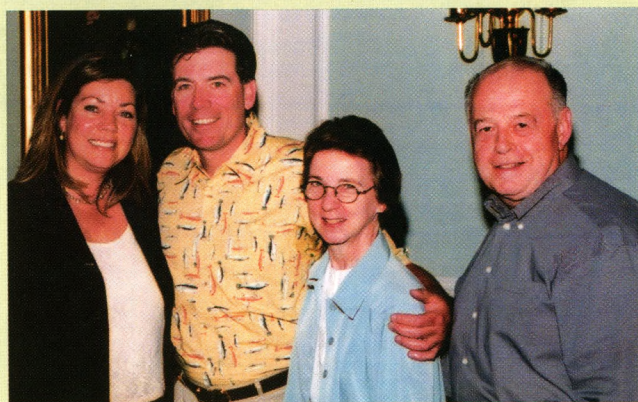

SJC President S. Elizabeth Hill has been elected to the board of the Long Island Coalition for Fair Broadcasting.

Interviewed in an article that appeared in the Long Island Business News, S. Elizabeth said she opposes a Federal Communications Commission proposal to relax cross-ownership restraints of media companies in this country. "The public needs and should demand varying views and arguments about the major issues of our time," S. Elizabeth said, "[because] only by having access to the fullest possible picture can we understand these issues and move toward wise solutions."

S. Elizabeth also expressed concerns about the overall quality of coverage of major topics and the absence of stories relating to Long Island, except in small special sections of newspapers. "I think [the media] sometimes forgets that its role is to report the news, not make it," she said.

Biology Honor Society chapter granted

St. Joseph's College has been granted a chapter of the National Biology Honor Society, Beta Beta Beta, an honor for the College and an aid to individual members in their pursuit of professional and graduate/medical education. The new chapter, Theta Iota, welcomed 12 inductees from Suffolk and 10 from Brooklyn, according to Assoc. Professor of Biology and faculty advisor Dr. Frank Antonawich.

The following students from Patchogue were installed: Christopher Baldi, Colleen Byrnes, Kristine D'Alessio, William Gocinski, Colleen Kearns, Kathleen Larsson, Claude Pluviose, Nicole Poma, Christina Rifici, Tiffany Rima, Joanna Tutrone, and Maureen Wenchell. The Brooklyn inductees are: Miranda Ellis, Veronica Fernandez, Jorge Mosquera, Mandy Pabon, Patricia Richroath, Karen Smith, Keshia Souffrant, Mamie Summers, Vickoriya Syrovatkina, and Kaisha West.

Tri-Beta is a society for students, particularly undergraduates, that involves components of scholarship, service and dissemination of science, three criteria fulfilled at St. Joseph's. Members need to have studied at St. Joseph's for at least one semester and completed a minimum of 12 credits in college level biology, while maintaining an overall cumulative average of 3.0 and a biology average of 3.0.

Dr. Diane Ravitch addresses Planning Day

Are the liberal arts in danger of being replaced by utilitarian curriculums that lead to degrees many students perceive as more salable in today's fiercely competitive job market?

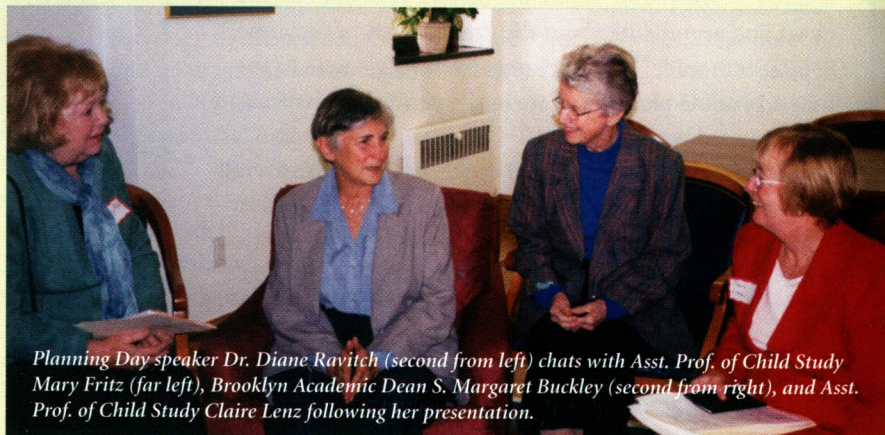

Leading education policy analyst, professor and author Dr. Diane Ravitch posed this and other questions about the state of the liberal arts in American education during her presentation to SJC faculty and administrators at last month's College-wide Planning Day. Research professor of education at New York University and former assistant secretary of education and counselor to then Secretary of Education Lamar Alexander, Dr. Ravitch expressed concerns about what she termed the "degradation" and "trivialization" of the liberal arts as more colleges and universities focus on business and technical training in response to students' changing needs.

Citing a National Center for Education Statistics report, Dr. Ravitch noted that "the study of business and business-related fields now dominates postsecondary education," while at the same time student enrollment in literature, history, mathematics, and other traditional liberal arts and sciences courses has declined. She offered several possible reasons for this drop, including students' desire to obtain "skills that are immediately useful and marketable" as an aid in finding a job upon graduation.

"They ask, and we have all heard them ask, 'What can I do with a degree in English literature? Or philosophy? Or European history?'" Dr. Ravitch said.

Dr. Ravitch encouraged St. Joseph's "to continue to treasure, strengthen and expand your mission as a liberal arts college," concluding that "the work of the liberal arts college is the work of civilization."

HISTORY

Dr. Phillip Dehne presented a paper at the Institute of Historical Research in London. The paper focused extensively on the question of whether or not the British economic war in South America during WWI illustrated British imperialism.

Dr. Seth Armus delivered a paper, "Patriotes malgré tous," at the Western Society for French History conference. The paper focused on French pro-Nazi reactionaries who, at the last minute, became anti-Nazi patriots, in 1940.

Dr. Monica Brennan authored "Taking Sides: Conformity in Early Modern Kilkenny," and "A Landmark Study" in Taking Sides: Colonial and Confessional Mentalities in Early Modern Ireland, edited by Vincent P. Carey and Ute Lotz-Heumann (Four Courts Press, 2003). She also reviewed Edith Mary Johnston-Liik's six-volume A History of the Irish Parliament in Irish Literary Supplement (Spring 2003). Dr. Brennan also presented a paper, "Clerical Conformity in Eighteenth-Century Ireland," at the National American Conference for Irish Studies.

INTERDISCIPLINARY

The following faculty were selected to participate in New York University's popular Faculty Resource Network Summer Program: Antoinette Hertel (Spanish), Literature of the Americas: New Approaches; Dr. Jill Rehmann (Chemistry), Physics in the Science Curriculum; Barbara Thorpe (Mathematics), Statistics and Probability in Developing Critical Thinking; Dr. Wendy Turgeon (Philosophy), The Practice of Ethics, and Dr. Julie Walsh (Political Science), Reckoning with Race in the Media.

MATHEMATICS AND COMPUTER SCIENCE

Dr. Gerald Cohen (Mathematics) was granted a U.S. patent for "Computer Program Profiler" with co-inventor Robert Barritz. The computer program provides an output that is used to profile one or more operational characteristics of another computer program.

S. Jane Fritz (Mathematics/Computer Science) served as a panelist/reviewer for the National Science Foundation, evaluating and recommending funding for Computer, Science, Engineering and Mathematics Scholarship programs. She was also a member of the "math thinking" group, which presented the ideas for the repository of mathematically-based teaching materials for computer science courses, at the international conference on Innovation and Technology in Computer Science Education.

Debra Freedman (Mathematics/Computer Science) authored a textbook, Let's Communicate: Communication Skills for the 21st Century, (Kendall-Hunt Publishers).

MODERN LANGUAGES

Dr. Maria Montoya (Spanish) wrote an article about the increased screening of Spanish films in New York City movie theaters and their exposure in English language Web sites in the Spanish online journal CineDocnet.

NURSING

The Nursing Department, in partnership with the Hemlock Park Elementary School of the Brentwood School District, was recognized by the American Lung Association of Nassau-Suffolk and the Nassau-Suffolk Asthma Coalition for piloting the "Open Airways for Schools" program in spring 2003. Dr. Laurel Janssen Breen helped coordinate and implement the program with nursing students April Tomanelli, R.N., and Sonia Nembhard, R.N.

RELIGIOUS STUDIES

Dr. Thomas Petriano developed two new courses, "The Religions of Abraham" and "Issues of War and Peace."

SCIENCES

S. Mary Maier, Ph.D. (Chair of the Physical Sciences Dept.) was awarded the Sarah Woode Foundation, Inc. Award for "Advancement of Science Education in Our Community." Sister was also named "Outstanding Science /Teacher of the Decade" by Nazareth High School in Brooklyn. Dr. Harold Afiriyie, a teacher at Nazareth and founder of the Sarah Woode Foundation, was a student of S. Mary's during her teaching days at Long Island University.

S. Mary Maier, Ph.D.

Dr. Michael J. Hanophy (Biology) entered into an agreement with Science Kit and Boreal Laboratories in Tonawanda, NY to produce a laboratory kit that he designed. The kit, "Chemical Carpentry: the Physical and Chemical Properties of Wood," is based on an article he published in a print journal. The kit appears in the 2003 Science Kit/Boreal Catalog.

Dr. Francis Antonawich (Biology) presented material related to the apoptosis research conducted with his students at the Society for Neuroscience Conference. In addition, he was a guest speaker and delivered papers at the following: "Effects of DNA Reductase on Central Nervous System Stem Cells," Garnett McKeen Labs; "Effects of Poly MVA on Central Nervous System Stem Cells," AMARC Enterprises; and "Effects of DNA Reductase on Stroke and Ischemia," Garnett McKeen Labs. With Dr.

Hanophy, he co-developed and team taught a new course, "Current Trends in Biology Online."

Drs. Francis Antonawich, Moira Royston, and Mohammad Rana (Biology) attended a two-day symposium at Bard College on Thinking and Writing in Science. The symposium involved a discussion of epistemological approaches to facilitate science teaching, incorporating the development of writing skills as well as teaching students to become better thinkers.

Dr. Mohammad Rana (Biology) developed a new course, Plant Biology, for Biology.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Dr. Richard Torz (Economics) chaired panel sessions on "Integrating Technology in Economics and Business Curriculums" and "Recent Developments in the European Union" at the 2003 Eastern Economic Association Conference. He also published "Teaching Economics to Undergraduates: Alternatives to Chalk and Talk" in the Eastern Economic Journal, and reviewed the textbook Money, the Financial System and the Economy by R. Glenn Hubbard.

Dr. Kenneth Bauzon (Political Science) presented the papers, "The Philippines and America's Perpetual War: Evolution of the 'Second Front' in Bush's War Against Terrorism," and "Militarism and Globalization in Neoliberal Agenda," at the annual meetings of the Midwest Sociological Society and the Global Awareness Society International, respectively. He also discussed President Bush's war on terrorism on the TV program, "Q&A," on the International Edition of Cable News Network (CNN-I).

Dr. Raymond D'Angelo (Sociology) was selected to write and co-edit the fifth edition of the Taking Sides Series entitled Taking Sides: Clashing Views on Controversial Issues on Race and Ethnicity (Dushkin/McGraw Hill).

Dr. William Bengston (Sociology) presented the following: "Imaging God:

- Religious Affiliation and Generational Cohorts," Eastern Sociological Society Annual Meeting; "A New Direction for Healing Research,"

Dr. Raymond D'Angelo

Society for Scientific Exploration Annual Meeting; "The Effect of the Laying-On of Hands on Transplanted Breast Cancer in Mice," New York Area Skeptics; "Some Effects of the 'Laying-On of Hands' on Methylcholanthrene Sarcoma in Laboratory Mice," Society for Scientific Exploration Annual Meeting; and "Resonance Theory and Healing Research: Some Methodological Implications for Control Groups," biennial European Meeting of the Society for Scientific Exploration.

Dr. Julie Walsh (Political Science) authored "1988 Presidential Election Essay," which appeared in American Presidential Campaigns and Elections, edited by Ballard Campbell and William Shade.

SPEECH COMMUNICATION

Dr. Dorothy Kelly is publishing her fourth post-graduate online course.

ADMINISTRATION AND STAFF

Kathleen Grimaldi (Suffolk Dean's Office) was one of 50 poets selected nationwide to participate in the 2003 Festival of Poetry held at Frost Place, Robert Frost's farm in Franconia, NH. She read her own work.

S. Joan Ryan (Callahan Library) was on leave during the spring 2003 semester to begin research on the history of St. Joseph's College since 1960. As the College approaches its 90th birthday in 2006, S. Joan picked up the research started by S. Joan de Lourdes Leonard for SJC's 1966 golden jubilee. S. Joan has been working with four history majors, and their research has included oral history interviews with members of the faculty and administration and College catalogs, yearbooks, and other publications.

The Brooklyn Admissions Office welcomes new assistant director Gloria Henn and congratulates Michael Learmond on his new position as assistant to the director of admissions. ■

CAMPUShappenings

1 The Science Club at the Brooklyn Campus sponsored a successful blood drive in September, held in cooperation with the New York Blood Center.

2 About 200 SJC students and faculty paid tribute to the heroes and victims of the 9/11 terrorist attack at a moving ceremony dedicating the new Memorial Garden outside of O'Connor Hall on the Suffolk Campus. The Contemporary History Society raised and donated money for the project, as did the Student Government Association and the College itself. Three SJC alumni and many relatives and friends were lost on Sept. 11, 2001.

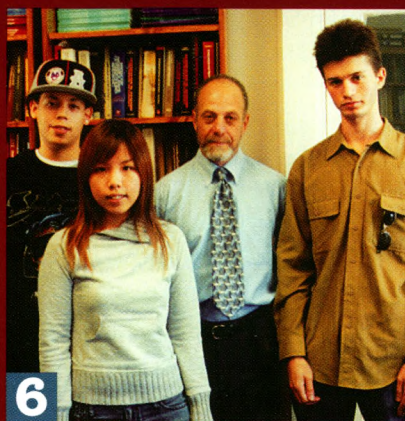

3 A practitioner of reiki, a method of natural energy healing, treats a patient at the first Holistic Health Fair and Diversity Day Feast held on the Brooklyn Campus by the BSN Club of the Nursing Dept. Other featured treatment methods included reflexology, healing touch, acupuncture, herbal medicine, aromatherapy, music, and tai-chi.

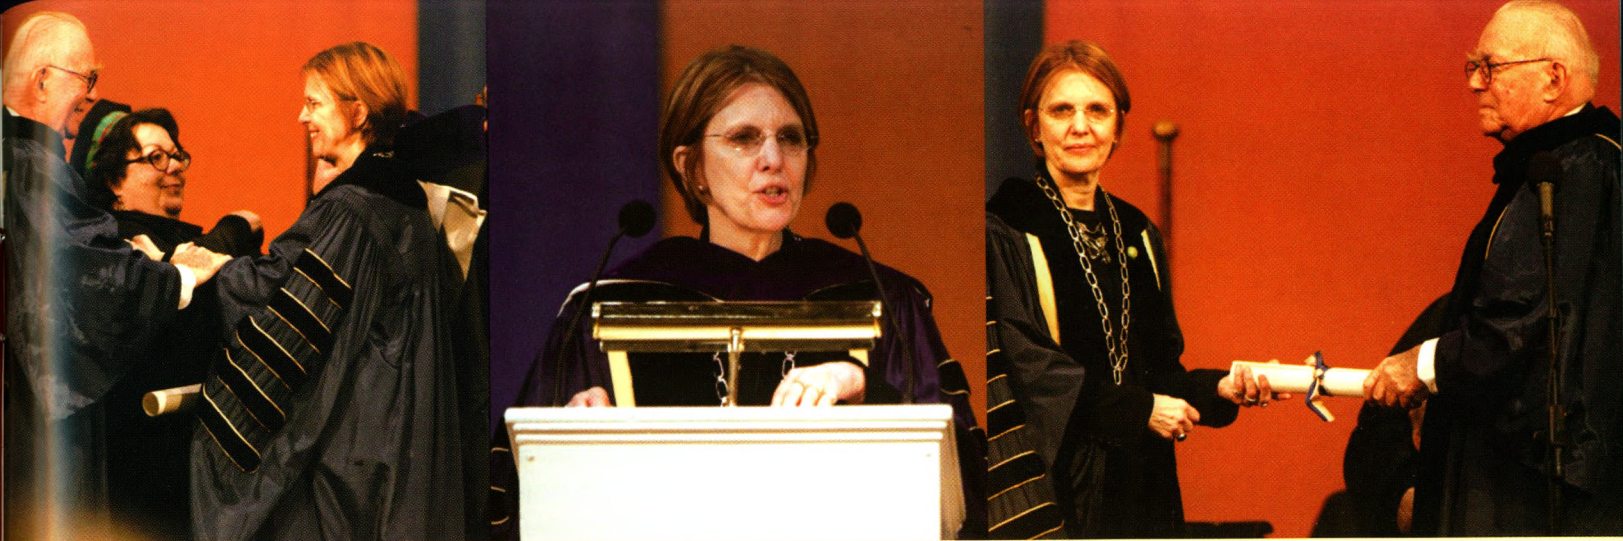

4 Brooklyn's Child Study Club hosted guest speaker Paula Beck in early October. Mrs. Beck, an accomplished teacher with many years experience in the public school system, shared her inspirational stories and words of wisdom.

5 The 410 members of the incoming class of the School of Arts & Sciences in Suffolk were presented to the College community at the annual investiture ceremony on Oct. 3. Dr. Randall Krieg, newly-appointed academic dean in Suffolk, welcomed the Class of 2007, telling them that St. Joseph's is "an ideal place to prepare for a career and to prepare for life."

6 Math Dept. Chair Dr. David Seppala-Holtzman (second from right) hosted a luncheon for the CAMSSA (Computer and Mathematics Scholar Support Alliance) scholars in Brooklyn. The program is offered by SJC and the National Science Foundation. From left: Steven Vasquez, Tiffany Chan, Dr. Seppala-Holtzman, and Aleksey Podushko. Thirty-five students were chosen as CAMSSA scholars in Suffolk.

7 Students on the Brooklyn Campus attended a creative interactive session tackling the sensitive issue of sexual assault and rape. Mike Domitrz (right, with student participant), whose sister was raped in 1989, developed the "Can I Kiss You?" program in response. The program challenges the way students have learned to date and focuses on such issues as "The Danger: What Risks Are You Taking?"

ALUMNA PROFILE

Joan Stewart '65: call her President Stewart

by Peggy Handle '00

When last profiled in the summer 1999 issue of the Alumnigram, Joan Hinde Stewart '65 had just been named dean of the College of Liberal Arts at the University of South Carolina. Today, some four years later, the entire St. Joseph's College community congratulates Joan on her recent appointment as the 19th - and first female - president of Hamilton College in Clinton, NY.

"Joan is another shining example of how St. Joseph's graduates flourish in their careers and contribute to the betterment of our global community," said SJC President S. Elizabeth Hill upon learning of Joan's appointment.

Speaking at her inaugural ceremony on Oct. 19, at which she received an honorary Doctor of Laws, President Stewart said that she and her family have "found a perfect home" at Hamilton College. In a light-hearted moment, Joan recounted a conversation she had with a first-year student during her first full day in office. When Joan told the student that she had majored in French, the student replied in disbelief, "French? Then how did you get to be president?"

"How did I get to be president?" Joan said rhetorically. "I am not at all sure. But maybe what the student was getting at was the question of preparedness. How did my career as a student of French prepare me for this new assignment? I will never stop believing that there is no better preparation for any way of life than the study of literature or any of the other choices a liberal education offers."

Over the past 33 years, Dr. Stewart has distinguished herself professionally as a champion of the liberal arts through her strong dedication to intellectual values, for which she has been recognized through various fellowships, awards, and honors. Colleagues perceive Joan as a smart and strategic thinker who remains a down-to-earth, warm individual committed to social responsibility and service. According to Joan, that commitment began to take root while she was a French major and honor student at St. Joseph's.

"There I formed close relationships with both my teachers and fellow students," she said. The "always rigorous and creative French courses conducted by [French professor] Miss Norma Mallia" inspired Joan's enduring passion for the study of language and literature. In fact, she can still recite some of the stirring passages from Racine, Giraudoux, and Verlaine, the subjects of many after-class sessions with Professor Robert Radus. She added, "I am intensely grateful to [Professor of Education] S. John Raymond, for her sustaining belief in me and for the unfailing wise advice she offered."

The first in her family to attend college, Joan graduated from St. Joseph's summa cum laude; she went on to earn a Ph.D. in French from Yale University in 1970. The recipient of several fellowships, she was a visiting scholar at Oxford University in England. At Yale, she met her husband, Philip Stewart, a professor of Romance Languages at Duke University. Both Joan and Philip specialize in 18th century French literature, and the couple has collaborated on several editions and translations of French novels. The published author of numerous articles, essays, and books, Joan currently is writing a book about women and aging in the 18th century. The Stewarts have two children, Anna Faye and Justin.

After a seven-month search, members of the Hamilton College Presidential Search Committee were so impressed with Dr. Stewart's energy, intellect, and commitment to students that they unanimously recommended her for the position. Stuart L. Scott, chairman of Hamilton's Board of Trustees, described Joan as "engaging, enthusiastic, and focused on student needs. Hamilton is fortunate to have attracted someone of such stature and experience to lead the college."

While giving her full attention to her presidential responsibilities, as time permits Joan hopes to return to the classroom to teach French, perhaps as a guest lecturer. But for the time being, she remains "just intensely pleased to be president of Hamilton College." ■

STUDENT PROFILE

Meghan Nolan: not just another pretty face

by Meaghan Ginnetty

"I'm not the Miss America type," says Meghan Nolan, matter-of-factly. "I didn't think it was anything I could ever do."

But she did, and at 20 years old, she is one of the youngest women to win the Miss Long Island Scholarship Pageant. Months of preparation - everything from physical training to practice interviews to shoe shopping - finally paid off when Meghan realized she was the last one standing onstage. "I looked into the audience and saw my dad standing, tears streaming down his face," she recalls. "It's a moment I'll never forget."

Six years earlier, Nolan joined the staff of Lifeline Mediation, the Middle Island-based counseling center that targets troubled and sexually abused adolescents. Her experiences at Lifeline generated her pageant platform, "Each One, Reach One: Mentoring America's Youth."

"Mentoring is something I love to do, but there are so many people who don't know about it and don't know the positive effect it can have on a child," Meghan said. "I didn't need to search for my platform, I just stepped onto it."

"Each One, Reach One" led Meghan on a crusade to promote Long Island's awareness of the severe lack of and need for mentors. She visited local schools, hospitals, and town councils, recruiting men and women to serve as positive role models for at-risk youth. She even rubbed elbows with fellow advocates Tom Cruise and Lorne Michaels at the National Mentoring Partnership soirée in Manhattan.

But her sparkling tiara sometimes feels a bit heavy.

"Last semester I was getting ready for the Miss New York State Pageant and trying to write a thesis proposal at the same time," she said. "I would make an appearance as Miss Long Island, then run to class to take a test. I don't think I could have managed all that without the incredible support and understanding of my teachers at St. Joe's."

Meghan transferred from Marist College in the spring of 2001, opting instead for the school in her own backyard. "Why would I go away when I have this great asset here, this great school that has such an awesome reputation for education?" reasons Meghan, who will graduate from St. Joseph's in 2004 as an English major, with a minor in Spanish. "I can't say enough nice things about the faculty [here]," she added. "I am blown away by the intelli-

"Anytime I have done an interview or given a speech in a huge arena, I think of him [Mr. Paganini] as part of the reason I am able to do this."

gence we have here."

That intelligence certainly has rubbed off on Meghan, who has maintained a strong grade point average while remaining active in her school, church and Lifeline communities during her reign as Miss Long Island. She attributes much of her success - both within and outside the classroom - to professors like Richard Paganini of the St. Joseph's Speech Department, whom she calls her own "mentor."

"Mr. Paganini's speech class was the best class I've taken at St. Joe's, at Marist -- anywhere!" she explained. "Anytime I have done an interview or given a speech in a huge arena, I think of him as part of the reason I am able to do this."

Inspired by such outstanding faculty members, Meghan is excited to delve further into her major this semester. As a senior education student, she'll be exploring the inner-workings of the adolescent mind through hands-on experience, while she serves as a student teacher at a local high school. Meghan hopes that this experience will prepare her for her post-graduate plans, which include teaching English and theatre courses in a high school. But, as Meghan says with a smile, "anything is possible."

Does this mean she's turning in her tiara?

"I'm done with pageants!" says Nolan, with an exaggerated sigh. "But I would tell any girl between the ages of 17 and 24 to try it...it's an unbelievable experience...and if you get the crown, you've won, and if you don't, you've learned so much about yourself."

Meghan Nolan certainly has done both, and with such style. ■

Mike is a 19-year-old college sophomore who just picked English as his major because he enjoys reading and has no clue about what to do with his life after graduation. In contrast, Kelly is a senior who was positive two years ago that she wanted to teach science, but now regrets her choice of biology and her goal of teaching.

If this sounds all too familiar to many students and their parents, don't despair. Dr. Paul F. Ginnetty, St. Joseph's College professor of psychology and practicing clinical psychologist, offers his own experience as a "model to legitimize what they are going through." Dr. Ginnetty began his own six-year formal psychological training on his 30th birthday.

An English major at Boston College (he graduated magna cum laude in 1972), Dr. Ginnetty said that his background in literature "is serving me well as a psychotherapist...you can only have so much life experience yourself." His dilemma during college was whether or not to enter the seminary, so he bought some time at graduation by teaching high school English for one year, deciding finally to pursue the priesthood and ultimately completing five years of training with the Passionists, a preaching order.

"I did all but march down the aisle," he told St. Joseph's College Magazine, before realizing that he wanted a wife and family. Now a practicing therapist for almost 20 years, Paul is happily married to Carole, a high school guidance counselor, and the father of four children aged 11 to 21.

Entering the Passionists also brought Paul to New York, where he received dual masters in divinity and theology from St. John's University. He met "some remarkable persons—bright, wise, open and great-hearted" among the priests "who continue to influence my view of the world." As the guest lecturer in October at SJC's annual Founders Day, Paul spoke to the topic of adult influence on the development of values among adolescents, examining issues such as youth's natural skepticism, media influence, and adults' own ambivalence about values.

There is no ambivalence in Dr. Ginnetty's support for a stronger lay voice in the Catholic Church. This is "clearly overdue," he said, pointing to "a generation of competent committed Catholics who take their faith seriously." This is why a reform-minded organization like Voice of the Faithful "is here to stay in one form or another," he has concluded.

In addition to his private practice where he offers individual, marital and family therapy, and his teaching responsibilities, Dr. Ginnetty serves as director of the College's interdisciplinary Institute for the Study of Religion in Community Life. The Institute was formed in the 2000 academic year under the "guiding spirit" of Academic VP S. Loretta McGrann and Professors John Hazard (sociology) and Mark Hessler (history). Its mission is to investigate and articulate the various roles religious institutions and individual people of faith can take to enhance community life.

Since then the Institute has hosted some notable speakers, including last year's author and liberation theologian Roberto Goizueta, and this past October's colloquium on "Women in the Christian Tradition: Past, Present, Future," with distinguished professors Dr. Elizabeth A. Johnson of Fordham University, and Dr. Serene Jones of Yale Divinity School. Paul is excited about another Institute-sponsored event coming next March to the College, an inspirational one-woman play of the life of Dorothy Day called "Fool for Christ."

Along with its present work that includes an annual Kristallnacht remembrance sponsored together with the Religious Studies Department, Paul sees more student-centered activities in the Institute's future. He would like to establish a learning/service internship program where students could work with community organizations promoting fair housing, outreach to migrant workers and the like. He also anticipates Institute involvement in research projects about various religious phenomena.

A professor at St. Joseph's since 1988, Dr.

Ginnetty's devotion to the College is obvious. St. Joseph's "strong humanism creates an atmosphere of true hospitality that respects people and leads to real caring engagement in both students' and each others' lives," he said, attributing this to "the charism of the Sisters of St. Joseph, who are the inspiration...they wouldn't know how to do it otherwise."

"It was never apparent," he continued, "that Patchogue had to happen...or that it would be the exciting, dynamic place it has become...it is a 24/7 vision that leads to this. Our 25-year challenge is how to maintain the key elements of the Josephite charism with their diminished numerical presence." He concludes with a nod to his own profession: "As a psychologist, it is an outstanding example of the power of the group." ■

Suffolk Campus welcomes new dean

by Christine Mullaney

For Dr. Randall Krieg, a college should be a "learning community" where students are empowered to develop the "knowledge, skills and values necessary to live thoughtful, creative and productive lives." Yes, career preparation should take place, but within the larger context of "intellectual, personal, social, and civic development."

The new academic dean of the School of Arts & Sciences in Suffolk, Dr. Krieg brings vitality, academic achievement, and a wealth of experience in teaching, administration and research to his post. Most recently, he served as assistant vice president for academic affairs, director of graduate programs, and professor in the Business Division of the University of Mary, Bismarck, ND. Before that, Dr. Krieg spent 13 years at the University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls, IA, where he was promoted to professor, Department of Economics, and served on committees responsible for decisions involving promotion, tenure, budget and research expenses.

Dr. Krieg ("Randy" to his colleagues) likes St. Joseph's student-centered approach to education, with its small classes and a good student-faculty ratio. "This stands out," he said in a recent interview, "as does the College's emphasis on liberal arts, brought together with career preparation." SJC's stress on intellectual and spiritual values, along with service, also matches Dr. Krieg's experience and approach. "I have a passion," he said, "for quality undergraduate education."

"Values," he explained, "need to permeate a school.

Just in the way faculty and administrators work with students, certainly in the curriculum we need to do what we say we do." As a professor, Dr. Krieg, who earned his Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Colorado at Boulder, introduced a new course, "Economics, Ethics, and Society," that involved a service component and portfolio assessment. He would like to develop a similar interdisciplinary course at St. Joseph's.

Noting, "curriculum is owned by faculty, but impetus for change can come from anywhere," Dr. Krieg was meeting with the faculty early in the fall to assess what is working and what needs to be improved upon. In his last position, Dr. Krieg worked with curriculum and chaired both the academic affairs council and the faculty council. His objective at St. Joe's is to provide faculty with an environment "that is supportive and enjoyable, while nurturing creativity and expanding opportunities."

Dr. Krieg's immediate, short-term goal is simply to "listen to people," including students and the community. "A priority is to be as open as possible," he said, so he maintains office hours for students in addition to mingling at student events, such as the welcome back barbecue in September. He would like to help students "appreciate this opportunity and take advantage of it and see its value while they are here."

Dr. Krieg wants to make St. Joseph's a "vital part" of the surrounding community and is "open to different partnerships with outside parties, businesses and individuals," all of which redounds to the benefit of students and faculty. He has personally worked to help the homeless in shelters and through Habitat for Humanity.

The role of computer technology in higher education is vital but not without conflict as it continues to change the dynamics of learning. At the University of Mary, Dr. Krieg chaired the Faculty E-learning Committee. He is "very impressed" with St. Joseph's new Business & Technology Center and considers technology "good if it helps us to learn more." He noted "an important distinction in technology per se for its own sake versus information literacy." He would stress information literacy so that students can use technology "to get what they want...in their learning and be able to apply it to their career."

Also essential to the life of the College is its alumni. Dr. Krieg and his family — wife Anita and daughters, Emma, 10, and Kyra, 7 — greatly enjoyed cruising Long Island Sound on the Martha Jefferson with a boat-full of alumni shortly after he joined St. Joseph's. "One goal should be to inform alumni what we are doing, but also to make it a two-way communication," Dr. Krieg said. "What direction do alumni think the College should take?"

Dr. Krieg has found the atmosphere at St. Joseph's "very hospitable...something that can be built on." Although he is still "sorting out" what he believes St. Joseph's greatest challenge to be, he did not hesitate to name the College's greatest asset: its "human resources, faculty and administration." ■

A new graphic identity for St. Joseph's College

by Nancy Connors

St. Joseph's College is proud to introduce a powerful new logo that embodies the College's mission as a vital center of learning.

The process of creating a new graphic identity for St. Joseph's began by taking a careful look at the mission. Where did the College come from? Where is it going? What is the important message and how does the college convey that message to prospective students, students, faculty, alumni, donors and friends?

The mission of St. Joseph's College is to provide a strong academic and value oriented education at the undergraduate and graduate levels, rooted in a liberal arts tradition that supports provision for career preparation and enhancement. The College aims in this way to prepare each student for a life characterized by integrity, intellectual and spiritual values, social responsibility and service – a life that is worthy of the College's motto, Esse non videri: to be, not to seem.

The logo design contains the date 1916, the year St. Joseph's College opened its doors in Brooklyn. The fleur de lis represents the Sisters of St. Joseph and recognizes their wise and visionary leadership. The crest and colors offer a contemporary background for these symbols of liberal arts tradition.

The new logo is at the center of an integrated communications plan, which will continue to unfold in the coming year. The plan, which includes new recruitment materials, a redesigned and expanded Web site, the St. Joseph's College Magazine and a new advertising campaign, is designed to spread the good news about St. Joseph's College. The last thing, the very last thing St. Joseph's wants to be, is a best-kept secret. It's time to tell our story. ■

Successful campaign funds Smart Classrooms at Brooklyn, Suffolk Campuses

by Christine Mullaney

St. Joseph's College has created 25 new Smart Classrooms in Suffolk and 23 in Brooklyn, the result of a highly-successful fundraising campaign that began in the summer of 2001. Support for the project came from all sectors—corporate, foundation, government, and alumni—raising $350,000 to date.

The College is very grateful to the following donors for their enthusiastic support of the Smart Classroom project: New York State Governor George Pataki; New York State Senator Caesar Trunzo; New York State Senator Velmanette Montgomery; the George I. Alden Trust;

Verizon Communications; the Rose M. Badgeley Residuary Charitable Trust, HSBC Bank USA, Trustee; Ridgewood Savings Bank; the KeySpan Foundation; and St. Joseph's College alumni.

Faculty in the Business and Technology Center that opened last year in Suffolk have found that using Smart Classrooms added much to the teaching and learning experience. Assistant Professor of Business James J. Barkocy, in discussing the topic of visionary leadership in his management classes, accessed a Web site that features Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., delivering his "I Have A Dream" speech, which Prof. Barkocy felt helped drive home the point to his students.

Assistant Professor of Accounting John J. Skinnon uses Smart Classroom technology in a different way, since all of the courses he teaches are quantitative in nature. The projection equipment easily allows him to display assignments as well as class examples including spreadsheets and solutions, which he can also e-mail to students. With the introduction of the additional Smart Classrooms on the two campuses, the College is replicating this earlier success in other areas of study.

Team effort yields HESC grant

by Christine Mullaney

Sister Karen Burke, associate professor of child study, and Michael Hanophy, assistant professor of biology, have secured a $5,000 grant from the New York State Higher Education Support Center for Systems Change. A division of the State Education Department, HESC is an initiative of the Office of Vocational and Educational Services for Individuals with Disabilities committed to developing and sustaining high quality, inclusive teacher preparation programs.

HESC offers grants to college faculty who co-teach teacher preparation courses with faculty from other departments. On the Brooklyn Campus, S. Karen and Dr. Hanophy collaborated on a major component of the Elementary Science Methods course, where changes in the New York State science curriculum have led to state assessments at the fourth and eighth grade levels. S. Karen instructed students on all necessary pre-laboratory information, and Dr. Hanophy was responsible for the lab portion of the course. All materials necessary for the administration of these performance tests were purchased using a St. Joseph's College Faculty Small Grant.

S. Karen and Dr. Hanophy plan to continue this project, not only with child study majors, but also with teachers in the local community to help them prepare for new changes in the state assessments and performance exams that will be implemented in 2004.

More good news

Con Edison contributed $5,000 for the Brooklyn Campus high school outreach program, Experiences in Scientific Research.

Announcing three new scholarships

by Annie Groat

The St. Joseph's College Office of Institutional Advancement is pleased to announce the establishment of three new scholarships funded by generous donations from alumni and friends of the College.

A $10,000 contribution from Carol Stone has created the Sister Joseph Damien Hanlon Scholarship Fund in memory of S. Joseph, who died last February. According to Christine Giangreco '69, a former student of S. Joseph's, "the idea for a memorial for S. Joseph Damien came to us even before Sister's funeral. So much of her life was focused on SJC – as a student there, as a teacher, as a historian...as a beloved professor of history and mentor to so many." Those wishing to contribute to the S. Joseph Damien Hanlon Scholarship may send their gift to Annie Groat, Manager of Annual Giving, 245 Clinton Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11205. Please make your check payable to St. Joseph's College.

Members of the Class of 1964 have raised more than $13,000 toward their goal of a minimum of $25,000 to endow a scholarship in honor of their 40th reunion on April 24, 2004. The Class of 1964 Scholarship will be awarded to a first generation college student on the Brooklyn Campus.

Finally, donations of more than $6,000 have helped to establish the Karen Andrews Mueller '73 Memorial Scholarship. Karen's family and classmates say that she "loved St. Joseph's College and was proud of the excellent education" she received there, inspiring them to create a scholarship fund in her memory that will make a difference in the lives of current and future St. Joseph's students.

In Memory of or In Honor of Scholarships are available for donations of $5,000 to $24,999. These special scholarships, which honor either the living or the deceased, are temporary because the entire principal of the gift is awarded each year.

Endowed named scholarships are perpetual because only the interest generated by the gift is awarded.

Partially Endowed Gifts of $25,000 offer one or more student(s) an award of $1,000 annually, while $50,000 gifts offer one or more student(s) an award of one-half their yearly tuition.

Fully Endowed Scholarships of $100,000 offer one or more student(s) an award of one year's tuition.

For information about the above giving opportunities, please contact Annie Groat, Manager of Annual Giving, at (718) 636-6876 or agroat@sjcny.edu.

Annual Fund Update

by Annie Groat

New National Annual Fund Committee

Cornelia Gildea McGuire '77 and Jack McGuire '76 have been named co-chairs of the new National Annual Fund Committee, comprised of alumni, faculty, parents, and trustees. The committee's goal is to raise $500,000 in unrestricted support for the 2003/2004 Annual Fund. For more information on the Annual Fund or committee membership, please contact Annie Groat, Manager of Annual Giving, at (718) 636-6876.

Two New Giving Societies Created

The College has established the St. Joseph's College Society to honor donors who make contributions for 10 or more consecutive years. Donors who achieve this level of consistent giving will be recognized in the St. Joseph's College President's Report, signifying their commitment to St. Joseph's.

To recognize donors whose generosity advances St. Joseph's mission, the College has created a leadership giving society. The Esse non videri Society has been named in honor of the College's motto, "to be, not to seem," and will recognize those who make an annual unrestricted or financial aid contribution of $1,000 or more.

Altman Foundation grant benefits Dunn Center

The Altman Foundation of New York City has awarded the College an additional $50,000 grant to benefit the Marygrace Calhoun Dunn Academic Center at the Brooklyn Campus. This is the second $50,000 grant the Foundation has awarded St. Joseph's in support of the Academic Center.

The Center was named in memory of Marygrace Calhoun Dunn, a 1946 graduate of SJC. Located in St. Angela Hall, it houses the ACES (Academic Center for Enhancement Services) program, which provides assistance to English Language Learner (ELL) students through workshops, individualized instruction and peer learning opportunities.

The College is extremely grateful to the Altman Foundation for its generous support.

Continuing a legacy of service: The Richard M. Barry Endowed Scholarship

by Annmarie Dull and Christine Mullaney

He was fundamentally a teacher. Richard M. Barry, a psychotherapist, administrator, teacher and former Jesuit whose calling took him from the classrooms of Canisius High School in Buffalo to the New York Jesuit Province in Puerto Rico and later to St. Joseph's College in Suffolk, lived a life dedicated to learning and serving others. Through the Richard M. Barry Endowed Scholarship, established in December 2002 with a $20,000 donation from his wife, Maryanne, and daughter, Aileen-Marie, Mr. Barry's family is continuing his legacy of care and service.

"One of the greatest joys of Rich's life was teaching at St. Joseph's, working with colleagues and students whom he admired and loved," said Maryanne Barry. "As a tribute to them and as a memorial for Rich, this scholarship is a deep comfort for his family."

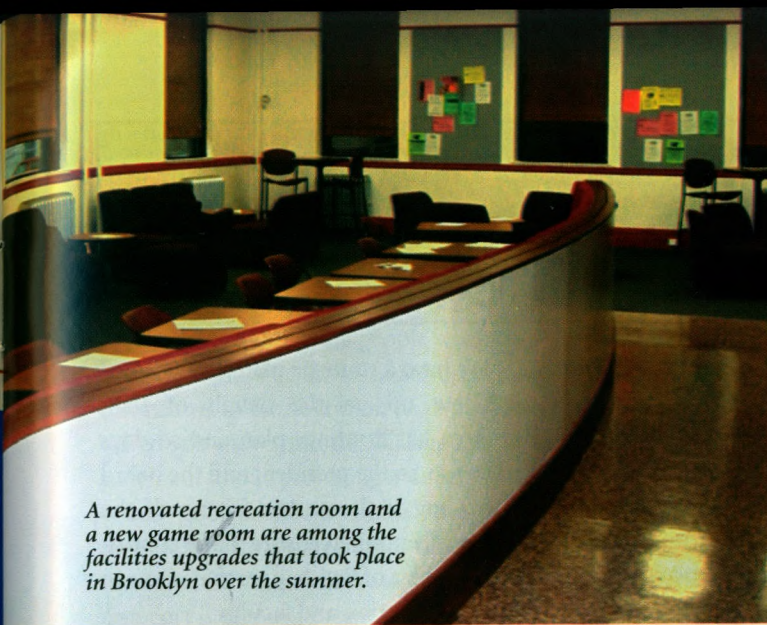

Mr. Barry, who taught in the School of Adult & Professional Education in Patchogue for 20 years until his death in 1996, was one of the most popular faculty members in the Dept. of Community Health and Human Services, noted VP and Dean Thomas Travis. "I can't overstate how much he was loved by students and faculty," commented Dean Travis, adding that "Rich was one of those rare individuals who by his example encouraged us all to consistently act with compassion and understanding. So, too, did he inspire students to achieve their full potential and to direct their talents and knowledge to the service of others. Rich lived his faith and his principles, not for show but rather to help those who aspired to learn, to heal, and to be healed."

A strong believer that humans are primarily social beings, Mr. Barry studied philosophy, theology and education at Woodstock College in Maryland, a Jesuit school associated with Georgetown University, graduating in the early 1940s. While working as a teacher and administrator in Puerto Rico, he created a summer camp and scholarship program for poor boys to attend the prestigious Colegio San Ignacio De Loyola, and initiated a fundraising drive that built a private high school for girls, the Academia Maria Reina.

After returning to New York, he introduced the first college courses for addicts at the Cooper Community Based Center in New York City, served as director of the Drug Education and Prevention Program in Bedford-Stuyvesant, and as an educational supervisor with the New York State Narcotic Addiction Control Commission.

Mr. Barry's final act of service was the donation of his body to medical science. ■

A renovated recreation room and a new game room are among the facilities upgrades that took place in Brooklyn over the summer.

Enrollment gains, expansion continue in new academic year

by Christine Mullaney

St. Joseph's College entered the 2003-04 academic year in a strong position, with enrollment increases on both campuses, 11 new faculty members, improved facilities, and growth plans moving forward.

Every year Suffolk's School of A&S boasts another record freshman class and 2003-04 is no exception. The 410 entering freshmen include valedictorian Marieann Vitillo from North Babylon H.S., and Suffolk Director of Admissions Marion Salgado noted that the mean average for entering freshmen rose to 87.5 from 86.4. Among those students ranked by their high schools, 45 percent were in the top fifth. Where decided among proposed majors, 36 percent of the students listed child study/special education, followed by mathematics, history, business, psychology, and English. An impressive 377 transfer students, along with graduate and non-matriculating students, brought the total entering class to 847.

Brooklyn A&S also showed enrollment gains, welcoming 112 freshmen, including four out-of-state students. Brooklyn Director of Admissions Theresa LaRocca Meyer said the College is receiving "many more inquiries from students across the nation" who use the Internet to research schools. "Having a collaborative housing program with Polytechnic University makes it even easier for out-of-state students to enroll," she noted, "and we look forward to increasing our geographic diversity."

In other Brooklyn admissions news, the entrance average for incoming freshmen increased to 87.7, and 36% of the entering class showed averages over 90. Twenty-five percent of ranked freshmen were in the top fifth of their graduating class. The organizational management program is particularly strong due to enrollment at St. Joe's six corporate sites at Symbol, Estee Lauder, Whitman Packaging, AT&T, IRS, and KeySpan. All of the majors registered increases, including the newest, computer information systems, now in its second year.

Improved facilities and new technology merged with the installation of grant-funded Smart Classrooms, 25 in Suffolk and 23 in Brooklyn. These classrooms feature the latest educational software, hardware and multimedia technology, including a whitewall combination projection screen and floor-to-ceiling whiteboard and ceiling-mounted projector.

Additionally, the College continues to implement Phase

One of its Brooklyn master plan with the renovation of the "245 Building" – now called Burns Hall – a beautiful Federal-style building that is to become the "welcoming front door" of the unified campus. The building is freshly painted and the College motto, Esse non videri, is scrolled in the entrance hall.

Also in Brooklyn, there is a new mini-cafeteria for all to use and a totally renovated recreation room, plus a new game room and upgraded fitness equipment added in the gym. Over the summer, McEntegart Hall's electrical, heat and air conditioning systems were upgraded, and work is continuing on its classrooms and lobby. ■

St. Joseph's College launched a new satellite site in Flushing, Queens, where the Brooklyn School of A&P is offering classes at the Long Island Business Institute. Through six- and 12-week Saturday sessions, students can earn credits toward a bachelor's degree in organizational management, computer information systems or health administration. Brooklyn A&P enrollment stayed high at 129 new students, and re-admits more than doubled to 46. As usual, police officers remained a strong presence, representing 14% of total enrollment.

Suffolk's School of A&P gained 187 new students and overall numbers of registered students grew to 807 from 762 in A Conversation with . . .

by Claudia Mirzaali

We recently sat down with S. Loretta McGrann, C.S.J., the new academic vice president of St. Joseph's College. Formerly academic dean of the Suffolk Campus, S. Loretta succeeded S. Mary Florence Burns, C.S.J., who retired in July after 34 years as SJC's chief academic officer.

Q. So, how does it feel to step into S. Mary Florence Burns' shoes?

A. Nobody steps into S. Mary Florence Burns' shoes. S. Mary Florence really mentored me in the administrative role while I was the dean on the Suffolk Campus. And in the course of that mentoring and the time we spent together, it became obvious to me how brilliant and compassionate she is, and what a good listener. She's very insightful and a wonderful academic. So, I guess she is still a role model to me. And I hope some day that I can fill her shoes. It's a process, and I'm lucky that she is still around so I can seek her advice. We have in the Josephite community a tradition of "wise women," women of the community that have gone before us, that we look to for wisdom. So I would say that for me S. Mary Florence falls into that tradition.

Q. What exactly are the duties of an academic vice president?

A. The main duties are to ensure that the curriculum and the faculty are outstanding and to make sure that the student population is getting the excellent education that it deserves. You do that through the hiring of faculty and the overseeing of the curriculum with the faculty. The faculty controls the curriculum, but the academic VP works with them. She also interacts with the president, the President's Council, and the board.

Q. What have been your priorities so far?

A. To get moved! In order to be available to both campuses, I have established an office in Brooklyn and in Patchogue, so that I can maintain the unity of the College and at the same time be sensitive to the different elements. We are always trying to form a community of learners who are St. Joseph's College as a whole. You want to know the whole as well as the parts. It's an important first step. And then I want to address the mission statement 'head on' because I think we always have to have that in front of us. As academic vice president, I will be looking for internal and external speakers who can give input, and the faculty will be called upon to reflect on the mission statement and to carry it out in a particular department or plan.

Q. What advice could you give your successor, Dr. Randall Krieg, the new academic dean at the Suffolk Campus?

A. I want to tell Dr. Krieg that he has a wonderful faculty and staff. And as any administrator, his role is to serve the faculty so they can do what they do best, which is to teach. But he should have great confidence because they are very easy to work with. They are very dedicated to the students and generous with their talent and time. What he would really want to do is look for people's gifts and encourage their development.

Q. What new initiatives are in the works for St. Joseph's College?

A. We have a strategic plan and we need to follow up on the details of that. Brooklyn has a master plan and so does Patchogue, so the president and the board are working on those. And for myself, the mission is central, to ensure that it continues, regardless of the changes that occur in the administration and faculty.

Q. How do these initiatives meet the needs of the students now and in the future?

A. I think anybody will tell you the value of a liberal arts education. In a recent New York Times article, James Friedman, the former president of Dartmouth, talked about the liberal arts as a preparation for life. He said that a liberal arts education will enable you to be flexible in your thinking, to read and write clearly, give you a "moral compass," and help you to know yourself. It will prepare you to deal with whatever life hands you and enable you to understand society and your place in it. I don't think you could ask for more than that. If we are doing it right, this is what our students should emerge with. The master plans are creating an ambiance for the development of intellectual community, and the strategic plan focuses on service and the development of new programs.

Q. In light of all the changes the College has undergone - and continues to undergo - how do you keep focused on the mission and the values upon which St. Joseph's College was founded?

A. I have a sense of mission, so that comes natural to me. I'm a big believer in education...you liberate people when you educate them. The Sisters of St. Joseph are committed to the liberation of all peoples. When you move into the College mission statement about providing a college education rooted in the liberal arts with preparation for a career, that ties back to the idea of trying to liberate. The liberation part is very important to me. The liberal arts are very important to me.

Q. What sets our academic program apart from other liberal arts colleges?

nary and look at the word "career," it means a path. One of the sentences using the word was, "the car careered around the corner." So you get a sense of movement and energy. I think you need to be a little bit more imaginative when you use the word career or career preparation. It's not job training, it's career preparation. How does the phrase career preparation link to the liberal arts? We separate them too much. Yes, you have to work and you have to make a living, but you should approach even that in an imaginative and flexible way. Liberal arts, taught well and learned well, is probably the most realistic learning you are going to encounter.

Q. With major improvements slated for Brooklyn, and the increasing enroll-population. That kind of creative learning needs to take place. In Patchogue they have a number of off-campus sites, many in businesses. We have already started using Sundays, especially in our collaboration with Adelphi University. We have to start looking further at Saturdays and Sundays. You have to move slow and easy because as you increase your enrollment, you have to build your faculty, and it takes time to find the right people and to mentor them into the College community.

Q. What is your personal vision for the College?

A. As St. Joseph's moves into the future, I hope that it maintains a commitment to academic excellence and respect for the

A. That is an important question. Again, the focus is on the mission statement. Are we as faithful to it as we should be? Are we as strong as we should be in promoting a liberal arts education? Are we as clear as we should be, because there is so much emphasis nowadays on a utilitarian education: "I go to college to get a better job. You go to college and when you leave, you go to work." I don't pooh pooh that because I came from a working class family myself. But maybe we should look at "career" differently. If you go to the dictioment in Patchogue, is the College ready for this growth?

A. The College is certainly in negotiations to purchase additional property in Patchogue and in Brooklyn. But we always have to think, if that doesn't happen, what do we do? You need to look at more flexible scheduling, better or increased use of online learning, maybe some off-site classes, particularly in the School of Adult & Professional Education. I know that the Brooklyn School of A&P has established a site in Flushing, reaching out to the Asian individual, that those two values are not just words. I hope we remain mission-centered and that when students come here they find the excellent teaching and support systems that enable each individual student to receive the best education possible. You have to keep embodying the words of the mission statement, make them real. And I hope that St. Joseph's College continues to do that. ■

OUR MISSION

The mission of St. Joseph's College is to provide a strong academic and value-oriented education at the undergraduate and graduate levels, rooted in a liberal arts tradition that supports provision for career preparation and enhancement. The College aims in this way to prepare each student for a life characterized by integrity, intellectual and spiritual values, social responsibility, and service – a life that is worthy of the College's motto, Esse non videri: "To be, not to seem."

SJC's annual gala to honor Mary Butz '69 and the Petrocelli family

by Claudia Mirzaali

St. Joseph's College is proud to recognize the Petrocelli Contracting Company and alumna Mary Butz at its 21st Annual Dinner Dance on December 5, 2003.

Joan and Jack Petrocelli and their four sons and two daughters will receive the College's 2003 Distinguished Citizen Award at the black tie gala, to take place at the Crest Hollow Country Club in Woodbury. The award recognizes the quality and integrity that the Petrocellis bring to their business as well as to their family life. Longtime educator Mary Butz, a member of the Class of 1969, will receive the College's 2003 Outstanding Alumna Award for her efforts to build a strong educational foundation in today's public schools.

The Petrocelli contracting and development firm has been known throughout Long Island and the five boroughs of New York City since 1959. When Joan and Jack established their business, they intended to create a niche of specialty projects that would reflect their values and beliefs. This intent is evident in the numerous St. Joseph's College, Roman Catholic Church, and YMCA projects the company has completed over the past 40 years. The Petrocellis have played a major role in the expansion of the St. Joseph's Suffolk and Brooklyn Campuses, and they have been longtime supporters of College events.

Mary Butz is an active member of the St. Joseph's College Alumni Association. Following a long career in public education, Mary is currently a vice president of the New York City Department of Education's Leadership Academy, which trains the school system's principals.

For the past three years, Mary served as executive director in charge of principal professional development. In 2000, she created the city's first program – Distinguished Faculty – to help new principals. The U.S. Department of Education recognized the program as a valuable national model for training new principals. In 1993, Mary created Manhattan Village Academy, a new public high school dedicated to the liberal arts.

Mary also has been an assistant principal at Edward R. Murrow High School; a social studies teacher in the New York City public schools; a principal mentor for New Visions for Public Schools; and an associate director of educational issues for the American Federation of Teachers in Washington, D.C. She has been honored by the New York Middle School Principal's Association and was the recipient of a Kellogg Foundation Fellowship, the first person ever selected for this distinction from the area of K-12 education.

Proceeds from the annual gala will benefit SJC student scholarships. ■

STUDENTS & POLITICS

Are today's students disenchanted with the political system?

If so, are colleges doing enough to turn the tide?

by Amy Cole

"Democracy in America is at risk and colleges are not doing enough about it. Colleges may say they encourage good citizenship, but their efforts are often random and students are increasingly turning away from the democratic process."

Expressed by Eugene M. Lang, the philanthropist who created the "I Have a Dream" foundation, this statement poses an important question to those leading today's institutions of higher education. That is, what are the public purposes of higher education in today's changing society? Should the nation's colleges and universities take responsibility for not only imparting intellectual knowledge, but also motivating students to become active, involved citizens?

A recent survey of public opinion published in The Chronicle of Higher Education (August 29, 2003) revealed that 85 percent of the polled public believes that preparing students to be responsible citizens is very important or important at the college level. Yet, according to another survey in the same issue of the Chronicle, only 19.6 percent of incoming freshmen polled said that influencing the political structure was an essential objective. Rather, the overwhelming majority (73.2 percent) considered financial success their main goal.

The Chronicle's survey reveals that only 19.4 percent of students polled even discussed politics in the last year. The non-partisan, non-profit organization "Rock the Vote," whose mission is to engage young adults in the political process by incorporating the entertainment community into its activities, reports that in 2002 only 32.3 percent of 18 to 24-year-olds eligible to vote actually did exercise that right. Additionally, Project Vote Smart (www.vote-smart.org), a Web site that provides unbiased information to the electorate, reports that voting turnout among young Americans (ages 18 to 24) declined by 13 percent over the last 25 years, a drop much greater than that exhibited by their elders.

However, the same survey indicates that optimism for a better society is high, with only 27.5 percent of freshmen surveyed believing that "an individual can do little to bring about changes in our society." Still, voting and political engagement among today's youth remain low.

So what do college students think will "bring about changes in our society"? According to The Chronicle of Higher Education survey, 82.6 percent of entering college freshmen polled had performed some sort of volunteer work in the past year, which appears to be a positive reflection on their civic-mindedness. Unfortunately, facts indicate that while students understand they can help meet their communities' real needs in a tangible, short-term, personal manner, they are not fostering deeper forms of political engagement. They fail to understand the necessity of reforming public policy to effect significant and lasting change in society.

According to Dr. Julie Walsh, associate professor of political science at St. Joseph's College, there are several reasons for political disengagement among college students. "The public school system does not empower students politically to the extent it should," Dr. Walsh explained. "Students often fail to see the stakes of politics and they have not been encouraged to develop

Plenty of student votes for convention

There was no lack of interest on the part of her students when Dr. Julie Walsh, associate professor of political science, asked for volunteers to attend a mock presidential convention in Manchester, NH, this January. On the contrary, the offer generated a great deal of enthusiasm in her classes, Dr. Walsh reported. "I have more people who want to come than I can send," she said.

Funded through a grant from the Student Government Association's "Crossroads" program, Dr. Walsh is sending four Suffolk SJC students to the January 7 convention, which will include high school and college students from across the country. All of the Democratic candidates for president, as well as President George W. Bush, have been invited to address the convention, and selected student delegates will get to cast their vote for the candidate of their choice at the end of the day-long event.

Now in its second year, the Crossroads program provides funding to faculty for special projects that "enhance the life of the SJC community," said Suffolk Director of Student Services Marian Russo. Past projects have included a trip to an art museum, a war and peace film series, and a tour of Harlem gospel churches.

the 'habit' of voting." Dr. Walsh adds that part of the problem is that, "neither political party has aggressively targeted the young or publicly addressed issues of concern to them."

Dr. Richard Torz, associate professor of economics at St. Joseph's, maintains that the decline in student engagement stems from "a feeling of disenchantment with the ability of the individual who is not rich and powerful to truly have input in the determination of political agendas and influence over the outcomes of political elections and political movements."

Unfortunately, disengagement in the democratic process and data indicating political dissatisfaction among college students bodes ill for the future. For the fact remains that in a democratic structured society, the only way to change policy is to participate in the political process, and the vast majority of today's college students are not convinced that voting brings about change.

In their book, Educating Citizens: Preparing America's Undergraduates for Lives of Moral and Civic Responsibility, the authors Colby, Ehrlich, Beaumont and Stephens argue, "higher education has the potential to be a powerful influence in reinvigorating the democratic spirit in America. Virtually all civic, political and professional leaders are graduates of higher education institutions, and the general public is attending college in even higher numbers with over 15 million students now enrolled in higher education."

What exactly can and should institutions of higher education, specifically St. Joseph's College, do about the societal problem of political disengagement among today's young adults?

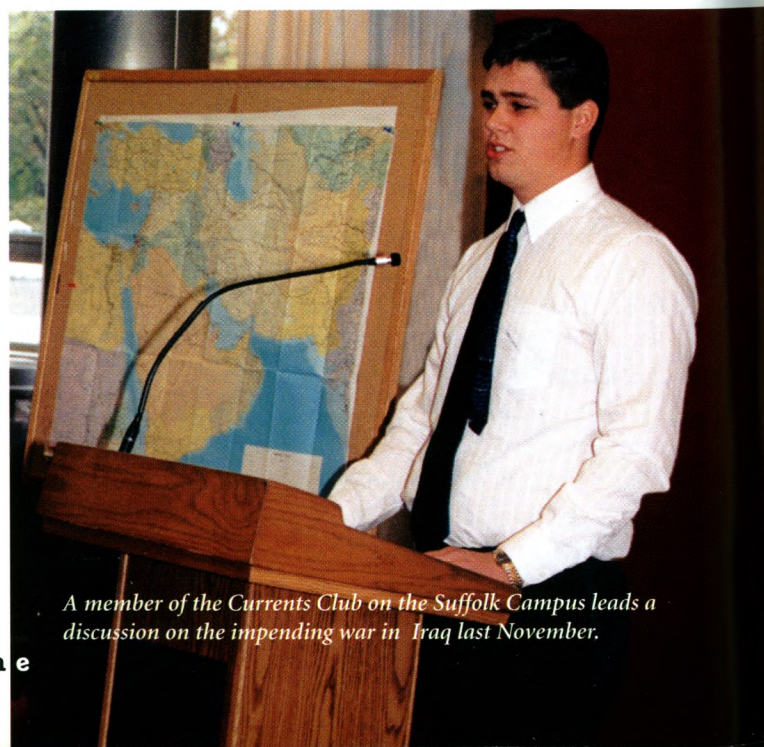

"It has always been the mission of St. Joseph's College to prepare our students for lives characterized by integrity and intellectual values, social responsibility and service," said Sister Elizabeth A. Hill, C.S.J., president of the College. "To accomplish this mission, the College established a set of goals. One of our objectives is to encourage our students to develop personal values systems, responsible self-direction and committed participation in the local and global communities.

"Additionally, the College's core curriculum is based on a set of courses that represent the areas of knowledge and culture deemed essential for a liberal education – that is, for women and men who must assume responsibility for directing their own lives and contributing to national and international decisions. One could therefore argue that intrinsic in the College's mission, set of goals and curriculum lies an ultimate responsibility of the College to foster political engagement in our student body, through academic and extracurricular activities."

Dr. Walsh agrees. "As S. Elizabeth points out, the mission of the College includes a charge to prepare students for a life characterized by social responsibility," she said. "Such a life would mandate political engagement at some level. The College therefore has a role in engaging students politically in academic and student life."

"As a liberal arts institution," Dr. Torz adds, "the College has a significant role in promoting political engagement among our students. Knowledge of politics and the political process makes a student more involved in and cognizant of the society we live in today."

A member of the Currents Club on the Suffolk Campus leads a discussion on the impending war in Iraq last November.

How does St. Joseph's College meet this goal of promoting political engagement?

"There are many ways," Dr. Walsh said. "In the classroom, we can apply contemporary issues to academic material when appropriate. The very activities by which students receive an education, for example reading and reasoning, should politically empower them. One of the goals of a collegiate education is to stimulate intellectual curiosity, and it's hard to imagine an intellectually curious student who is not politically engaged to some extent. The encouragement of community service, service learning and attendance at student conferences can also be applied to promote political engagement."

"The trick is to get college students to be more aware of events and situations not directly related to them at this time but which will certainly have bearing on them in the future," explains Dr. Torz. "In my courses I use case studies and both scholarly and professional articles to point out issues that our students should follow closely, as they will eventually become relevant to them. Outside my courses, I often engage students in discussions regarding events in the political arena. I feel that if they hear and talk about these issues, they will think about them and may, at some point, decide to get involved in some capacity."

St. Joseph's commitment to the promotion of political engagement extends beyond the classroom. In recent months, the College's Office of the President and the Office of Institutional Advancement have initiated extracurricular programs to support the cause. Specifically, the College has joined Campus Compact, a national coalition of more than 900 college and university presidents committed to the civic purposes of higher education. To support its civic mission, Campus Compact promotes community service that develops students' citizenship skills and values, encourages partnerships between campuses and communities, and assists faculty who seek to integrate public and community engagement into their teaching and research.

Additionally, the College has partnered with the Association of American Colleges and Universities (AAC&U) and Long Island University to plan and co-host a "Campus-Community Dialogue" during the spring 2004 semester. The goal of the event is to bring together college presidents and academic leaders with secondary educators and business and community leaders to address the issue of what students need to learn in today's society, with an emphasis on knowledge of the political process.

As we approach a presidential election year, the question remains: are we doing enough? Despite St. Joseph's best efforts, both in and out of the classroom, the decision to take an active role in the world ultimately rests with our students. For in essence, they are the ones who will determine – through their action or lack of action – whether democracy indeed survives. ■

by Susan Kane and Christine Mullaney

Is student activism alive at St. Joseph's College? Core groups of students at both campuses say definitely yes.

Despite the time constraints many students face with outside jobs in addition to demanding school work, political and current affairs clubs in Brooklyn and Suffolk have small but committed memberships. "With all those pressures, we're still here," said Ryan Sullivan, VP of Suffolk's two-year-old Currents Club, which sponsors forums during Common Hour where students can speak out on timely issues. Recent topics have included the war in Iraq and the Patriot Act, and members report good turnouts.

"Being a commuter school makes it harder, but people still come to our forums, so that's encouraging," said Currents Club President Mary Kate Hoblin. The club is organizing a debate on the issue of whether homosexuals should be allowed to marry. A group trip to the United Nations is also in the works.

Often a student does not become an activist until he or she is personally affected by an issue or event, students said. "Something happens and you get passionate about it and want to learn more about it," explained Ryan. Currents Secretary Bruce Bentley agrees. "It just takes one issue to motivate someone," he said. In his case, it was the Patriot Act that sparked his interest and led him to join Currents.

Like Currents, the newly formed Contemporary History Society on the Suffolk Campus hopes to engage students through guest speakers, movies, literature, debates, and trips. The group was formed in the aftermath of the tragedy of September 11, and one of its first events was a campus rally in support of U.S. troops in Iraq. Over the summer, members helped raise money for the 9/11 Memorial Garden outside of O'Connor Hall that was dedicated September 11 of this year.

CHS President Jonathan Chiamonte and the 20 members who are the core of the new club are enthusiastic about their plans, which include a program to "Relive American History Through Music, Movies and Literature"; a presentation featuring guest speakers from various wars about serving as a soldier; a debate with the Currents Club; and a trip to the Gettysburg Military Park in Pennsylvania.

In Brooklyn, students interested in contemporary political issues can join the Political Affairs Club, which publishes a monthly newsletter dedicated to current events that affect everyone. Athena Thomas, president of the club, said members are now researching such diverse topics as famine in Africa, candidates running for U.S. president, and animal rights. They are also mapping out plans for future lectures and debates, and a trip to Washington, DC, in the spring. In addition, the club turns words into action by sponsoring events such as November's food drive and a blanket drive in December.

According to Ryan Sullivan, providing a forum where students can come together and express their opinion in an atmosphere of respect and openness is an important first step to empowering them politically. "If you have the will to throw out your ideas, as long as your voice is being heard, you have some sort of power," he said.

SUFFOLK SOCCER

The men's soccer team stands at 10-7-1 and 4-3 in the Skyline Conference. Senior striker Tim Trava has led the way; Trava, the 2002 NCAA Scoring Champion, was named Skyline Conference Player of the Week twice this season. Coach Gary Smith won his 400th career soccer game this season.

The women's team stands at 11-6 overall, 3-2 Skyline and 3-1 WIAC. In what has turned out to be a terrific season for Coach Joe Lee's team, the ladies have set a new record for wins. Sophomore Adrienne Postiglione leads the team with 21 points and is tied with senior Francine DeJosia for the lead in goals (8).

BROOKLYN SOFTBALL

The Lady Bears posted an impressive 22-8 record last season, including a 15-game winning streak, tying for first place with the defending league champs, Mt. St. Vincent. Coach Frank Carbone was selected Conference Coach of the Year.

SUFFOLK VOLLEYBALL

The Golden Eagles were headed to their second straight NCAA Division III Tournament after capturing the Skyline Volleyball Championship on Nov. 10 in Kings Point. The Golden Eagles (21-9) were set to play Nazareth College (28-9) from Rochester, NY on Nov. 13 in a first round match at New York University. Coach Sean Holden's squad, which went into the Skyline Tournament as the #3 seed, upset #2 seed Mt. St. Mary in the semifinal (30-17, 30-23, 30-25). That victory advanced them to the Skylines vs. the top-seeded Mariners of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

BROOKLYN BASKETBALL

While hard-pressed to repeat their record

setting 22-win season, the prospects are very strong for a Hudson Valley Conference Championship "three-peat" for the Lady Bears with the return of a veteran-laden line-up and sophomore leading scorer Michelle Softy. Highlights of the 2003-2004 schedule include a Division II tournament hosted by Nyack College; a Jan. 24 date with the USCAA National Champions, Mt. Aloysius College; and another special game appearance at the Continental Airlines Arena on Feb. 8.

The men's team made the most of their first-ever appearance at the USCAA National Tournament last spring. Senior Luke Caccavo, who achieved the 1,000-point milestone last season, returns to lead the team into a challenging 2003-04 season. The Bears will compete in the Clarkson College Tournament and then on to Williamson to challenge the USCAA champs.

SUFFOLK CROSS COUNTRY

Michelle Talento finished first in the 6K at the Stevens Invitational, beating runners from 19 other colleges, and she successfully defended her Skyline and WIAC individual women's titles. Both the women's team and the men's team finished third at St. John's.

BROOKLYN DANCE TEAM

On Aug. 22, the Dance Team participated in the "Liberty Dance Days" promotional event sponsored by Madison Square Garden, performing on the court prior to the WNBA New York Liberty Game. The team appears again at MSG on Jan. 16 prior to a New York Knicks game, and will also dance during half-time at the Lady Bears game at the Continental Airlines Arena on Feb. 8.

SUFFOLK WOMEN'S TENNIS

SJC welcomed new coach, Glenn Nathan, who led the young team to a 3-4 record this season.

Recent grad publishes first book

Dawn Bugge DeLorenzo '01 has fulfilled her lifelong dream of writing a book for young people. Inspired by her author-father and encouraged by her fifth grade teacher, Dawn has published her first book, Peanut Butter and Jelly Possibilities: Youthful Inspirations (Chrysalis Publishing, Inc.). She has agreed to bring along and sign copies of the book when she returns to the Suffolk Campus on February 16, 2004, to speak to undergraduates.

Peanut Butter and Jelly Possibilities contains true stories about young people who have accomplished extraordinary things through their love, hope, courage, commitment, and charity. Each story is followed by questions that can be used as a springboard for group discussion or as writing prompts by teachers, counselors, parents and others who work with children.

Since graduating from SJC as a child study major (with a concentration in speech communication), Dawn embarked on a successful career in education, moving first to Staten Island and then again to New Jersey after she met and married her husband, Joe.

She currently teaches language arts - and interestingly - an elective in criminalistics and forensic science at The Newgrange School of Princeton. Dawn's uncle and Brooklyn alumnus Ernest Bugge '93 was a New York City detective, which sparked her interest in criminalistics and forensics.

She finds joy in serving others

Judy Ingrassia '97 was recently featured in a Newsday profile highlighting her work in the health care profession. A registered nurse with a B.S. from St. Joseph's and a master's from SUNY Stony Brook, Judy has been employed in the health field for 28 years. She is currently an administrator at the Long Island Care Center and a member of the Gerontology Professionals of Long Island, based at SJC's Suffolk Campus.

"I have a passion for caring for the residents under my roof," Judy was quoted as saying in the Newsday piece. "You can't put money on that. It is just something that I enjoy doing, and I get self-satisfaction and my greatest joy from serving others. That's what I've done most of my life, and the rewards are priceless."

One of her goals is to expand the pain-management program at Long Island Care. The Center recently opened a hospice unit which offers quality end-of-life care for patients and services and support for families. "Our overriding focus is for patients' well-being," she said. "Their comfort is our highest priority."

HAVE FUN, HELP A FAMILY IN NEED

The SJC Cheerleading Team has rallied in support of the family of one of its own, 2003 graduate and former cheerleader Deanna Baisley. Deanna's younger sibling is very ill, and the team has come together to organize an alumni vs. faculty and students basketball game to raise funds for the family's medical expenses. The game will take place on Saturday, Dec. 13, 2003, beginning at 2:00 p.m., at the Danzi Athletic Center on the Suffolk Campus.

Following the game, a reception will take place for all participants. Later that evening, the SJC women's and men's basketball teams are scheduled to play at 5:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. respectively, and all are invited to stay to cheer them on.

The cost to play in the charity basketball game is $20, which includes a free T-shirt. The team is requesting a donation of $5 per person at the door for spectators. For registration forms and/or further information, please call (631) 744-0279 or e-mail sjccheerleading@hotmail.com.

The St. Joseph's College community mourns the tragic loss of Suffolk student Dion Arroyo, a 20-year-old sophomore who was killed in an automobile accident on September 11, 2003. An excellent student who was highly respected by his friends and professors, Dion will be sorely missed.

FINAL word

An education: a privilege and a responsibility

by Congressman Tim Bishop

The recipient of a Jesuit education, I was instilled with a simple credo, "education for others." It is the belief that receiving a higher education is a privilege, which carries with it an obligation to use what we have learned to help others.

In my previous job as provost of Southampton College, I tried to instill in students the understanding that as recipients of a higher education, we have been granted a profound blessing which millions of Americans can only dream of. But that blessing brings with it a responsibility to help society.

One way to give back to society is to become engaged in our political process.

I believe there has not been a time in recent memory where it is more important for people to get involved in politics. In the last election, there was an approximately 40 percent voter turnout. That means that less than half of Americans even registered their opinion, even though the issues on the table could not be more important. Here are just some:

- Should the U. S. pursue a new strategy of unilateral, pre-emptive wars or should we work closely with allies and only fight wars of self-defense?
- Since 2001, Congress has approved over $2 trillion in tax cuts. Should we continue to pursue additional tax cuts, or should we use our resources to meet needs such as education, national defense and health care? And either way, what do we do about skyrocketing deficits that will create a tremendous debt burden on future generations?
- Should we continue Social Security and Medicare in their traditional roles as defined-benefit programs, or should they be privatized?

The list of issues goes on: gun control, the environment, prescription drugs, to name just a few.

The U.S. has always had an implied social contract that we all have a responsibility for one another's well being. It also holds that we have an intergenerational responsibility, perhaps best expressed in how the Medicare and Social Security Trust Funds work. Today's workers pay for today's retirees, with the understanding the world better off than we found it. I believe our social contract is in peril.

This debate is critical, which is why it is essential that all Americans get involved. One way to enter this great debate is to get involved in your community. As the saying goes, "think globally, act locally."

Changing the world does not mean you have to run for political office. It can begin with an act to improve your community, something as simple as being a Big Brother or coaching a Little League team. It is an act of giving, of instilling values, of taking on something larger than yourself.

Robert F. Kennedy best articulated this value in a 1966 speech in South Africa, where he spoke to the victims of apartheid:

"Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring, those ripples build a current which can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance."

The privilege of a higher education gives us the tools to build a better society, but also carries the responsibility to use those tools wisely and get involved. I believe that each of us can be a ripple of hope and improve our community one act at a time. ■

Congressman Tim Bishop (D-Southampton) represents New York's First Congressional District. He currently serves on the Transportation and Infrastructure and Education and the Workforce congressional committees.

"Changing the world does not mean you have to run for political office. It can begin with an act to improve your community, something as simple as being a Big Brother or coaching a Little League team."

that tomorrow's workers will pay for their retirement, and so on.

This contract also affirms that the next generation should be more prosperous than the current one, and we should leave

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Friends,

I write to you at the conclusion of another fruitful year in the life of St. Joseph's College. Through much hard work, we have met many of our goals, while continuing to plan diligently for the future.

In my 1997 inaugural address, I shared with you my personal vision for St. Joseph's: namely, that we could become the best, small, affordable college in the liberal arts tradition in the New York metropolitan area. Our ranking among the top-tier of Northern Comprehensive Colleges in the U.S. News & World Report 2003 survey of "America's Best Colleges" demonstrates that we are indeed well on our way to becoming just that. In fact, St. Joseph's was the only institution in the Brooklyn and Long Island regions to earn a place on this prestigious list.

The excellence of our faculty and academic programs was further affirmed with the awarding of a $393,750 grant from the National Science Foundation. This grant, the largest in the history of St. Joseph's, will provide academic and financial support to students preparing for careers in the fields of mathematics, computer science and computer information systems.

The NSF award coincided with two other notable events in 2002-03: the debut of our new major in computer information systems, and the opening of the College's $8.3 million Business and Technology Center at the Suffolk Campus. Featuring the latest educational software, hardware, and multimedia technology, this outstanding facility is the most recent addition to our growing Suffolk Campus. At the same time, the College continued to implement phase one of its master plan for Brooklyn, with renovations to Lorenzo Hall and McEntegart Hall well under way.

This past year, St. Joseph's also embarked on a new institutional identity program, leading to the creation of a new College logo, redesigned recruitment publications, a bold new advertising campaign, and the St. Joseph's College Magazine that we introduce with this issue.

I want to mention one other important (albeit bittersweet) milestone, the resignation of S. Mary Florence Burns as VP for Academic Affairs. During her 34-year tenure, Sister was a pillar of the College community, and her wise leadership was key to our extraordinary growth. S. Loretta McGrann, Suffolk Academic Dean since 1995, has embraced the challenge of leading the faculty, expanding our curricula offerings and assuring our continued commitment to academic excellence. I am confident that she will serve the College well in her new role. At the same time, I warmly welcome Dr. Randall Krieg, Suffolk's new Academic Dean, who in the short time he has been with us has demonstrated both creativity and leadership skills.

Finally, let me take this opportunity to thank each of you personally – our dedicated faculty, administration, staff, alumni, trustees and many friends – for the contributions you have made over the past year. The progress we have made – and the high quality of education we offer – are the direct results of your continued commitment, confidence and support.

Sincerely,

Sister Elizabeth A. Hill, C.S.J.
